Juniata College is an independent, privately supported coeducational institution committed to providing a liberal arts education to qualified students regardless of sex, race, religion, creed, color or handicap. Its policies comply with requirements of Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, and all other applicable federal, state and local statutes, regulations and guidelines.

On the cover: Jeff Muriceak '91 and Kathy Hoover '91 are fine representatives of the Political Science Department. They are working with alumni in law offices this semester as part of the internship program.

POLITICAL SCIENCE: Preparing Students To Take An Active Role In Government

For many Americans a typical morning may go something like this...once aroused from a deep sleep, we head for the television to get a glimpse of the weather or latest news in the world, country, state or local community. After the coffee is perking, and the bathroom is filled with a steamy mist from the hot shower we dress to the tune of a morning news anchor telling us who died in an overnight plane crash, where the market stands, what the president has on his agenda for the week and much, much more.

In the car and on our way to work, we may struggle to find a radio station that fills the "drive time" space with more news, or perhaps a talk show about an anticipated recession. Finally at work, we have a second cup of coffee and glance at the morning news headlines. Page one — "Concern Rises in Congress over War in Middle East," "Oil Jumps and Dow Drops" and "Keating Five Have Their Day in Court." Page after page is filled with stories of political action and government decisions. Finally we get to the comics only to find that even to understand Doonesbury we must possess a certain level of political awareness.

Political threads are woven so tightly into the fabric of American life that in order to be informed, to be considered cultured, to be viewed as educated we must understand events taking place in the political arena.

Dr. Thomas Baldino, chairman of the political science department explained in a recent interview, "I think that every person is affected in some way on a daily basis by politics or government. You drive your car on roads maintained by the government; the fuel pumped into your gas tanks is taxed by the government; and government regulators and inspectors examine the food you eat. You just can't get around it, the government is there.

"The problem," he continued, "is that most people aren't aware that they could affect governmental decisions by: (1) following current events; (2) contacting elected officials at the state, local and national level; (3) voting on election day; and (4) putting pressure on their elected officials to follow a course of action consistent with what they desire.

"Most people believe they can't change anything," he added, "so they don't do anything. That is a big mistake."

Make no mistake about this point, however. Students at Juniata College know that they can make a difference and a solid background in political science is the key.

Nearly 120 students (10% of the student body) hope to pursue a career in the field of political science, while many other students in business, psychology, education, biology, English and sociology take political science as a sub-emphasis.

In order to provide political science students with a well rounded experience, they are required to select three political science electives and participate in a senior seminar, independent study, honors research or internship (see separate story). In addition to fulfilling general education requirements, political science students must choose two courses in the social sciences, humanities and history areas.

Beyond the classroom, students are expected to read a daily newspaper and stay abreast of national and international events.

Study abroad is encouraged by the department, particularly for students concentrating on international politics.

Speakers are invited to campus to present lectures on political issues, and students have the opportunity to engage in frequent discussions with faculty outside of class.

This fall, for the second year, the department hosted a reception for freshmen interested in political science. The event was designed to encourage interaction between new students and the faculty. According to Dr. Baldino a tremendous amount of energy is directed toward the education of every student.

"We try to cover a wide array of courses," he said, "some courses are basic, others more advanced. We want to give our students as many opportunities as we can and work with them very closely. With 120 students in the department we can give each student good close attention and develop a personalized four-year plan for them with a capstone experience during their senior year."

Ken Brown, a junior from Annville, Pa., hopes to work for the Justice Department in Washington D.C. "I've been very pleased that the Political Science Department faculty works together as a team and honestly seems to hold the needs of the student in the forefront of its thinking.

"After one particularly long advising session," he said, "I thanked the professor for his extra time and effort. He brushed it off, saying, 'That's my job.' The type of concern and effort exemplified by the department here at Juniata shows that, fortunately for the students, extra concern, time and effort are the norm."

Chris Bush, a junior from Attleboro, Mass., added, "The strength of the department lies within the faculty. Every member goes above and beyond what is normally expected of a college professor. They really become an integral part of our lives.

"Interaction does not stop at the classroom door," he said. "The professors attend many college functions — social as well as educational — and make it a point to become well acquainted with students."

In addition to the faculty's commitment to teaching and advising, they are active writers and researchers and view themselves as professionals in their field (see separate story).

"The professors bring more than just a Ph.D. to the classroom, Bush said. "Each faculty member brings real life experience into the lectures and discussions. Whether it be an experience with the Supreme Court, the American Consulate in Bombay, or life behind the Iron Curtain, these experiences provide students with an idea of how the information they are learning can be applied in real life."

Real life experience combined with textbook teaching works effectively in the Political Science Department at Juniata College. The result is a college graduate who has the tools to be informed, cultured and truly educated.

THE CURRICULUM

The curriculum in the Political Science Department includes courses designed to enhance a student's ability to think analytically, read critically, speak articulately and write effectively, as well as developing his or her capacity to conduct independent study or research and analyze data.

Courses are organized into four basic concentrations: American Government, Public Administration, Public Law and International and Comparative Politics.

REQUIRED INTRODUCTORY COURSES:

Introduction to American Government
Introduction to International Politics
Introduction to Western Political Thought

REQUIRED AREA CONCENTRATION: CONCENTRATION IN AMERICAN POLITICS

State and Urban Politics
American Political Thought
The U.S. Congress
The American Presidency
Public Policy Analysis

CONCENTRATION IN PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

Law and Society
State and Urban Politics
Public Administration
The U.S. Congress

CONCENTRATION IN INTERNATIONAL POLITICS

European Politics
Politics of Developing Nations
Comparative Communism
International Law and Organization
Theories of International Politics
South Asia Since Independence
Politics of the Middle East
Politics of the Soviet Union
Politics of Latin America
Special Topics

In addition to these courses, students are required to select courses from the social sciences, history and the humanities. All political science students are required to participate in an internship, independent study, honors research or senior seminar.

The Politics of Political Science Internships

by
Patrick Wilshire, '92

In the field of political science, job competition can be fierce. "Connections" comes to mean a great deal, as well as experience. When it comes to gaining experience, however, all too often the age-old catch-22 applies — no experience, no job; no job, no experience.

Juniata College has found a way to help its students break out of that vicious cycle and at the same time discover for themselves what it's like to "make it" in a political science career.

They are called internships, and they are rapidly becoming an expected part of Juniata's political science curriculum. Dr. Thomas Baldino, chairman of the Political Science Department and the man behind political science internships, explained what they are all about:

"What I look for in a placement," he said, "is a position which will grant the student an opportunity to learn the job by observation, and then apply what is learned. Eventually the internship supervisor will delegate real responsibility to the student, and the student has the opportunity to work, with minimal supervision, but with creativity and ingenuity."

The internships range from local placements, such as in Huntingdon law firms, the Huntingdon police department or in the Huntingdon borough manager's office, to high level placements, such as in the Pennsylvania Commonwealth Court, in the House of Representatives in Harrisburg and in the firm of a political lobbyist in Washington, D.C.

The internships are subdivided into three categories: law, public administration, and politics. These categories can be more narrowly focused if a student has a particular interest, such as tort law, for example. In this case, the student can be placed with a law firm in Philadelphia which does nothing but tort law, as opposed to the local Huntingdon firms which cover a broader spectrum of legal work.

The structure of the internship is typically one semester of work. Since academic credit is given for the experience, there must be an academic component to the internship.

Dr. Baldino asks his students to keep a daily journal in which they record what they have done, what questions have been raised and how they feel about what they have seen and experienced.

There is also a paper or project undertaken during the internships and due upon completion of the experience. For example, one student was asked to prepare a proposal for the initiation of an official Huntingdon/Juniata College relationship.

The students who do internships are a mixed group intellectually. The system for determining who gets an internship is not based on a straight grade point average. There is a bottom level set, however, since, as Dr. Baldino explained, "it would be difficult to justify the placing of a student with a 2.0 average or thereabouts."

Even more important than grades, according to Baldino is maturity. "Though a student may have a 3.5 or 3.6," he said, "if the student is not mature, there's no way that the college will send that student out into a real-life work situation where responsibility is placed on his shoulders and people depend on him." It is no accident that Baldino prefers to place second semester juniors and seniors.

"That extra bit of maturity and additional class exposure really does help," he said. "Since the internships should be conducted in a way that places some academic component into them, the more academic preparation that the student has, the better."

Several recent Juniata graduates were involved in internships, and were very positive about their experiences. Sue London, a 1990 graduate, is currently employed by Juniata College in the position of assistant director of the Annual Support Fund. Sue did three internships during her stay at Juniata: one with Senator Robert Jubelirer, one with Senators Heinz and Specter, and one as a legislative aid for United Cerebral Palsy. Susan felt that the most important aspect of all her internships was the hands-on experience which she received.

Dan Stambaugh, a 1989 graduate from Spring Grove, took two internships during his four years, one with Senator Jubelirer and one with Senator Heinz. Currently working as a legal assistant for Senator Roger A. Madigan, Dan believes that his internships prepared him for the reality of government, giving him his first real taste of what government work was like. He found his experiences universally rewarding and very satisfying.

One Juniata student who hasn't had the chance to put her internship experience into practice yet is junior Phyllis Heverly of Philipsburg. She said that her experience working with the Department of Environmental Resources was "a very positive experience. I encourage all students to do internships. The college itself, particularly Mike Ford (director of internships), is a real help in getting the internships that you want set up."

Any alumni interested in sponsoring an internship should contact Mike Ford, or, if they would specifically like a political science student, Dr. Thomas Baldino.

The political science internship has made a significant impact on a number of students. Many have found that the career choices they had foreseen for themselves were truly correct; others decided that under no circumstances did they ever want to do "that" for a living.

The internship is intended to help Juniata students plan their lives and prepare for the world around them. In this, the program which is subdivided internally, is singularly successful.

John Olsen '92 of Potomac, Md. was an intern with Common Cause. He communicated with members of Common Cause in numerous states and informed them of the legislative action on campaign finance reform. Olsen encouraged the members to write to their congressmen, distribute literature and become politically active on the issue.

Professors and Professionals Are the Norm Not the Exception in Political Science Department at Juniata

"We are very businesslike, professional, committed, serious and successful. In this department we try to conduct ourselves in a professional way which would be no different than if we were working in government, in law, or in business," said Gary Aichele, associate professor of political science.

Dr. Aichele earned his B.A., Ph.D. and J.D. from the University of Virginia; he is a former practicing attorney and Judicial Fellow at the U.S. Supreme Court. In the spring of 1990 he was the recipient of the Lindback Foundation Award for Distinguished Teaching at Juniata College.

Dr. Aichele sees his top priority to be that of teacher and advisor, but he also believes that it is important to be an active learner and writer and always maintain a professional image for students.

He said, "I'm always writing, reading materials, and checking galleys of work that will be put before my peers. That's a major chunk of my life. It's important to be current in your own field. By that I mean that you are constantly struggling with the most immediate ideas confronting the field.

"No field is static for very long," he added. "There is always someone pushing, challenging or attacking what had been the established norm. So, to be current in your field means that you continue to cultivate an appreciation for the avant-garde, the radical, because it could become the norm in the next ten years."

Dr. Aichele believes that he owes it to himself and, more importantly, to his students, to be aware of emerging trends and developments in the field. "The students we are teaching right now need to know what is being said out there, because these are the hypotheses that bright young students will be working on in the next decade," he explained.

Dr. Aichele is currently doing original research on the fragmentation of constitutional culture, focusing on national constitutional norms. "If you aren't doing your own work," he said, "you have no credibility when you ask students to engage in serious work.

"I try to be an example for my students. Good writing does not come without challenge and frustration," he asserted. "If they see that hard work may generate a book, then they should be able to apply that same work ethic to a 10 page paper and get good results." Aichele recently published his first book titled, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr.: Soldier, Scholar, Judge.

In addition to his research and teaching, Dr. Aichele serves on numerous college committees and is an active participant in several professional organizations. He has served as a speaker for local community groups and maintains an active correspondence with colleagues at other institutions.

Students have a keen awareness that the faculty members in the department are hard working and involved. Kate Hoover '91 said, "The entire department seems to work together and they really know their stuff. Having worked as professionals in their field before becoming teachers, enables them to provide us with a good representation of what a career in law, public administration and international affairs would be like."

A retired diplomat with over twenty years of service in South Asia, Dr. Craig Baxter is an experienced teacher, active scholar and author of eight books. "I feel that you should look for three things in a faculty member. First, they must be a teacher and advisor, next, they need to do research to keep their brains active, and finally, they should be active in academic and community organizations."

Dr. Baxter earned his B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania. He is president of the American Institute of Bangladesh Studies, trustee of the American Institute of Pakistan Studies, and treasurer of the Mid-Atlantic Region of the Association for Asian Studies.

He agrees with Dr. Aichele, stressing that it is essential to stay current in the field and incorporate the information into lectures. "I am constantly reading journals, publications and newspapers from India, Bangladesh and Pakistan," he explained. "I need to know what is happening and more important why it is happening. That is what I really like about this department. This staff is always asking why? We do it at the professional level, local level, national level, international level and even at the institutional level."

Assisting Dr. Baxter with the international dimension of political science is Dr. Tomislav Sunic, assistant professor of political science, and a new addition to the department. Dr. Sunic earned his bachelor of arts degree from University of Zagreb in Yugoslavia, an M.A. from California State University, Sacramento and a Ph.D. from the University of California, Santa Barbara.

Dr. Sunic teaches courses in European and Soviet/Communist politics. He is fluent in four languages and has recently published a book titled, Against Democracy and Equality: The European New Right. Dr. Sunic, in just his second semester on campus, brings to the classroom the unique experience of life in Central and Eastern Europe and its contrast to living in the United States.

Dr. Sunic is working on a project with a faculty member from Elizabethtown College to bring foreigners and visiting scholars to campus for a panel discussion. In addition to that project, he is a member of the American Political Science Association and the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies. He is a regular contributor to journals and newspapers and enjoys writing poetry and literature.

Sophomore Bill Brenner finds the diversity in the faculty a great asset to the educational process. He explained, "The professors pay great attention to detail, and present a variety of viewpoints. The diversity of backgrounds enables the department to provide a wide scope of study areas. In addition, the professors take great effort to encourage our intellectual growth."

Ken Brown, a junior, added, "It is quite obvious that the department is well versed in all areas of political science, from Bangladesh to Theory Z in public administration. Perhaps most important, they are able to back up their arguments with relevant facts and theories. Though each professor in the department brings his own spin to politics, that serves to illustrate theories that may otherwise go unexamined."

Not only can the faculty members offer students different views on particular items, but the faculty's activity beyond teaching serves as a positive image for the institution. Dr. Thomas Baldino, chairman of the department, explained, "There is no question about it. When we are active in professional organizations, present lectures at other institutions, publish articles and make contacts with faculty at other colleges and with public officials, we are bringing credibility to the department and favorable recognition to the institution."

Dr. Baldino came to Juniata in 1979. He earned his bachelor of arts degree from LaSalle College, an M.A. from the University of Illinois, and a Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania. "I try to keep myself active as a scholar," he said, "because when I keep myself engaged intellectually that carries into my classroom."

According to Dr. Baldino he changes his lectures annually based on discoveries in his research. "My courses are fresh because I'm always adding new information," he explained.

For the last few years he has been working on a project with Dr. Sandra Featherman from Temple University. They are examining how and if Philadelphia's influence in state government has changed over the past 25 years. Dr. Baldino expects this work to be published in the near future.

He usually writes a paper or two a year, such as the one recently presented on representation and the nature of congressional change at the Northeast Political Science Association Conference. The paper is part of a larger project on the development of congressional parties and the nature of representation in the United States.

In addition to his writing, he serves as vice president of the Pennsylvania Political Science Association, serves on the Executive Council of the Northeast Political Science Association, and is a member of the American Political Science Association and the Midwest Political Science Association. Beyond that, he has twice been selected to serve as a Commonwealth Speaker.

"We are a very active department as a whole. Not only do we care a great deal about our students, but we also feel that we are good teachers and true professionals in every sense of the word," summed up Dr. Baldino.

Dr. Craig Baxter, professor of political science, is an experienced teacher, active scholar, author of eight books and retired diplomat with over 20 years of service in South Asia.

Area Studies Important in Political Science Curriculum

During the years of turmoil and mayhem that characterized the period of World War II, academicians throughout the country began to realize that Americans knew very little about our enemy — or for that matter our friends. While we were at war with Japan, allied with China, had troops in Africa and planned Italian beach assaults there were not very many people around who knew much about these far away places.

The ability to translate Arabic to English, which had been a prime function of Middle Eastern scholars, for instance, was not what was needed to assist the war effort. What the United States government needed were people who knew about the political climate, cultural nuances and economic systems of countries which American academics had previously considered somewhat...esoteric.

From this sudden interest in other areas of the world came a new, interdisciplinary field — area studies.

Area studies are basically that — intensive, interdisciplinary studies of countries and areas other than North America and Western Europe.

While a prime focus may be economic, for example, an expert in area studies might also be expected to know something about art history, political history and anthropology. In the case of India, Juniata's Dr. Craig Baxter, professor of politics and history, said in a recent interview, although a person might be studying the area from a political standpoint, it is necessary to remember that the prime focus of India (and some of its poorer neighbors) is basically economic. The politics of India are based around producing a higher standard of living for the populace of that country. Therefore, it is obviously necessary to have at least some grasp of Indian economic policy in order to truly understand their political reasoning.

This intense, "across the board" knowledge of a country does not necessarily come at the undergraduate level.

"Undergraduate school can lay the groundwork," Baxter said, "but it is necessary to continue on, probably to the level of the Ph.D., in order to gain a sufficient understanding of the necessary disciplines."

Several Juniata professors embrace this concept, and it shows in the courses which they teach. Dr. David Sowell, assistant professor of history, is versed in the studies of Latin America. Not only does he teach the history of Latin America, however, but he also teaches a course on Latin American politics.

Dr. Tomislav Sunic, a native Croatian from Yugoslavia and assistant professor of political science, teaches both Communist politics and Russian History.

A further refinement of the area studies idea that is found at Juniata occurs in Dr. Sunic's classes. Here, the infusion of different "ingredients" occurs not in different courses, but within the boundaries of one single course. Dr. Sunic provided an example:

"When I teach a course in comparative communism, I sometimes illustrate the nature of communism with some dissident literature from Eastern Europe or the Soviet Union. Different fields need to be cross-fertilized in order to make them more palatable for students, especially at this stage."

The newest addition to the Political Science Department is Dr. Tomislav Sunic. Dr. Sunic brings an international dimension to the curriculum, having lived and studied in Yugoslavia.

This approach appeals greatly to the college students who may not be majoring in the course in which they have enrolled. By incorporating ideas from different disciplines, the students may be able to see a connection between their own field of study and that of the instructor.

The literature of Leo Tolstoy, for example, says a great deal about Russian history in addition to being great literature in its own right. When the student of Russian history reads Tolstoy, he finds that this author speaks to him even more successfully, for the student now knows the cultural situation from which Tolstoy wrote. This occurs in many different areas, all of which, at some point or another, cross-index with other fields.

Area studies are, without question, a relatively new field. However, with the growing importance of understanding the overall "big picture," area studies will continue to grow in importance.

AFTER JC, THEN WHAT?

A college education is a process of exploration and discovery. It is an opportunity for students to learn about themselves and put their lives in perspective within the context of the global community. It is a time to prepare for a lifetime of work and to build a foundation for a full and satisfying intellectual life as well.

Juniata is committed to the belief that the four years a student spends on campus should do much more than provide the skills and knowledge that they will need in the workplace — these years allow students to build the resources to think for themselves, the confidence to do anything they imagine, and a sense of their own place in history and in culture.

Chris Bush is one of these students who is looking for his place in history. "Political science is something I have wanted to study since I was a child," he said. I have always been fascinated by our governmental structure and the way it works. I think every child, at some point in his life, wants to be president. While there may only be a slim chance of getting elected, I think I could at least be one of his or her right hand men — assisting in the decision making process."

His goal is certainly not unattainable. The liberal arts education has provided the foundation for one-fourth of all United States presidents. Perhaps Mr. Bush will fulfill his childhood dream one day.

Students have general ideas about their futures in the political science discipline, but concrete goals evolve through tedious academic rigor and arduous effort by a highly sophisticated faculty.

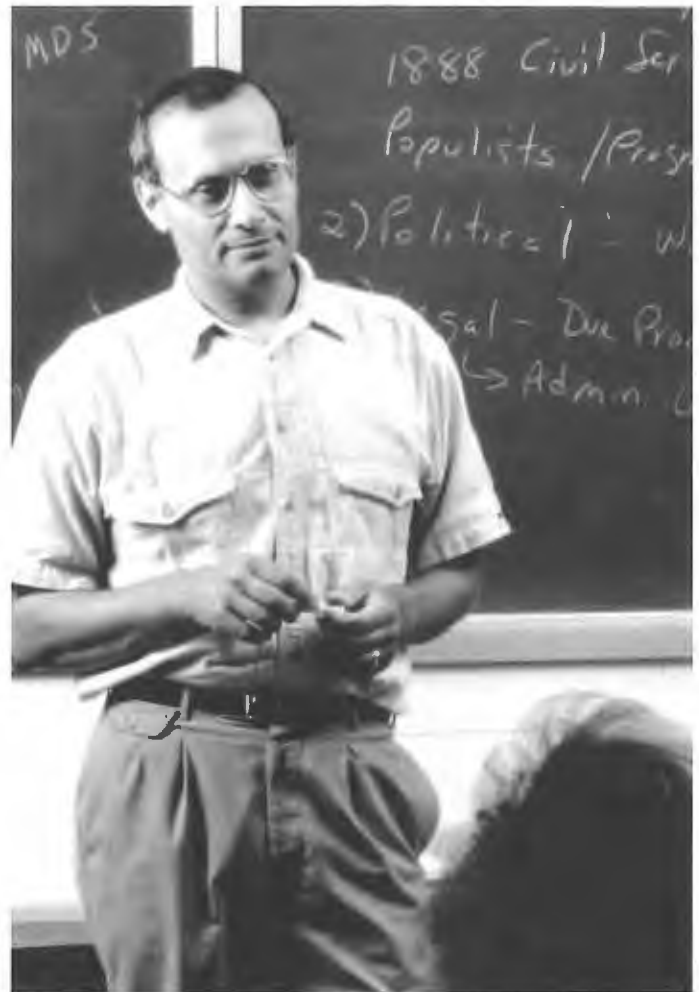

The outcome of Juniata's educational philosophy is demonstrated by the success of the alumni. Over 400 Juniata alumni are involved in law, governmental and political careers. Alumni involvement in this particular field is relatively high considering that the department was formed at Juniata in 1967.

Juniata has educated several judges — including a Supreme Court Justice for the State of Nevada; FBI agents; State Police officers; a realty specialist for the Dept. of the Interior; a wage administrator for the Department of Defense; an assistant U.S. attorney; a senior development specialist for the Washington Metropolitan Area Transportation Authority; attorneys for the U.S. Justice Department, the United States Navy, Pennsylvania State University, Temple University, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Hershey Foods Corporation, the Department of Human Resources, the Legal Aid Society of Dayton, Chevron Corporation and the Department of the Treasury in Kansas City.

The list continues, the careers prestigious, and the alumni grateful for a liberal arts education of the highest quality. Faculty play an important role in providing that kind of education. Thomas Jefferson suggested that the essence of an institution of higher learning is the faculty and the students."

Making decisions about jobs is one thing, planning careers is another. That is the general consensus of the Political Science Department faculty at Juniata.

"Our goal in this department is to motivate students to increase their self-confidence in their own intellectual ability," explained Dr. Gary Aichele, associate professor of political science. "We suggest to them, that in the long run, if they want the kinds of lives that they talk about having, if they want to do the kinds of things they say they want to do, then they must not only prepare to do well at Juniata, they must be prepared to do well beyond Juniata."

Department chairman Dr. Thomas Baldino is a truly dedicated educator and advisor. He has been a member of the faculty since 1979.

Students usually have a general idea that they want to study political science, but few know exactly what they want to do with that degree, hence the faculty become advisors.

"Our chief objective is to begin to shape the expectations of students as early as possible, Dr. Aichele said, "and the pre-admission stage is the best time to do that. Then, from the freshman experience right on through, every contact with every advisor, and every meeting is a kind of coaching pep talk to try to encourage them to understand what they are up against. And what they are up against now is an exceedingly competitive world."

He believes that advising is a much better tool for motivation than the faculty/student experience in the classroom. "For whatever reason, you get a different relationship with a student than you could ever establish in a classroom, even a small one. I think all of us in this department really believe in a highly interactive, hands-on, involved, coaching kind of role.

"Our goal in this department is to motivate students to increase their self-confidence in their own intellectual ability."

— Dr. Gary Aichele

"The real advising," he added, "is to try to get students' attention, to try to get them to take an interest in their own academic careers and to try to get them to understand that what they are learning as freshmen is the first stage in what they will have to rely on for the rest of their lives. It is hard to get an 18 or 19-year-old to see that during the next four years they will 'pack their knapsacks' they will have to live out of for the next 50 years."

Dr. Craig Baxter added, "I think our task as advisors is first of all, to listen to what the student is trying to say, and then on the basis of that, ask questions like: 'Have you really thought about this?, Is this really what you want to do?' We don't want to impose ideas upon students, but rather allow them to develop their own goals. It is not always an easy job."

In addition to advising, other experiences play an important role for students making career choices. Dr. Thomas Baldino explained, "Students enter without an understanding of what political science is about."

Over their four years at Juniata, students discover that there is more to politics than the president or congress, and that the discipline of political science requires a rigor of thought that can be brought to bear in any number of careers. Generally by their junior year, student awareness about career paths crystallizes and a focusing of energy and study occurs which ordinarily leads to further study in law, public administration, political science, or into the work force in the student's career.

Students have varying ideas about what it is they want to do after graduation, some students will go to graduate school, others will study law, a few will go into careers in journalism, business, and public administration, several may join the Peace Corps or Brethren Volunteer Service, they will also work as lobbyists for special interest groups and organizations.

Through exploration and discovery, political science students at Juniata College have the opportunity to establish the foundation for building a full and satisfying intellectual life.

Students who graduate with a degree in political science from Juniata are informed, confident and educated. These students have the skills and tools to confront all of life's challenges.

AROUND AND BEYOND CAMPUS

Heritage Society Dinner at Juniata Recognizes Dr. John Baker

The Juniata College Heritage Society met on campus during Homecoming Weekend for its annual dinner at Ellis College Center. Dr. Joseph Good of Hollidaysburg, interim chairman of the Juniata Board of Trustees, served as master of ceremonies.

The event honored members of the Heritage Society, an organization for persons who have planned to remember Juniata College in their wills. Dr. John C. Baker, a member of the Juniata class of 1917 and chairman emeritus of the Board of Trustees, received special recognition at the dinner.

"(Dr. Baker) is a pioneer for the concept of providing for Juniata's tomorrow through bequests," Juniata President Dr. Robert W. Neff told the gathering. "Not only is he a member of the Heritage Society, but he has influenced countless others to include Juniata College in their legacy. Dr. John C. Baker is the model of the Heritage Society member."

Dr. Neff also noted that three scholarships, three instructional funds and a library fund have been endowed through Dr. Baker's family's generous bequests.

Two individuals close to Dr. Baker and Juniata, Dr. Andrew Murray, director of the Baker Institute for Peace and Conflict Studies at Juniata; and Dr. Edwin Kennedy, long-time member of the Board of Trustees; offered testimonials before a bronze likeness of Dr. Baker was unveiled. The bust, sculpted by Helen Roeloff, will be placed for display in Shoemaker Galleries.

"To ensure that persons like Dr. Baker, who have notified the college of Juniata's inclusion in their wills, receive our sincere thanks during their lives, the college started the Heritage Society," explained Chandler Blewett, director of capital gifts at Juniata. "The Heritage Society recognizes these people by publishing their names in the annual Report of the President, by permanently inscribing their names in a leather bound volume for display, and by inviting them to campus each year for a dinner in their honor."

Dr. Edwin Kennedy, long-time member of the Board of Trustees (left), and Dr. M. Andrew Murray, Director of the Baker Peace Institute (right), offered testimonials before the bronze likeness of Dr. John Baker (center) was unveiled at the Heritage Society Dinner.

Ms. Anne Baker, daughter of John Baker, and Dr. Robert W. Neff were among those to recognize Dr. Baker for his generosity to the Juniata College community.

This year's Heritage Society dinner was held in conjunction with Homecoming Weekend and the fall meeting of the Juniata Board of Trustees.

"The Heritage Society is one of the successes of the last decade and its continuation is a promise for the future," said Dr. Neff in his final remarks to the group. "We thank you for the generosity you showed when you made Juniata part of your heritage."

FALL THEATRE PRODUCTION: 'Lysistrata': War and peace in ribald classic

by Catherine Merrill

If Barbara Bush would "just say no" to George, as Lysistrata told her Athenian girlfriends to do 2401 years ago, would it stop war in the Persian Gulf? Doubtful, but one can't help pondering such dubious solutions while watching "Lysistrata"—Juniata College's fall theatre production—for Aristophanes's Greek Old Comedy rings with bittersweet relevance today.

As comedy has ever made palatable those truths that are too hard to swallow, so too this ribald classic delights us with bawdy puns, endless double entendres and farcical incongruity, all the while penetrating more serious issues—how to stop war.

Lysistrata, played with expert command by Christie Brown, leads the women of Athens and Sparta in a brilliant scheme to stop their men from warring with each other: they must refuse sex until a peace treaty is signed. Since "our only weapons are our gowns and perfumes," the ladies vow to tantalize—but not satisfy—their ardent husbands, promising "I will not lift my slippers to the ceiling." They take refuge in the Acropolis and bar the gates of what must be a perfect architectural metaphor of feminine chastity.

Such symbol hunting is part of the fun, for "Lysistrata" is thick with sexual innuendo—nearly every other line makes some phallic reference ("onward and upward" say the old men as they hilariously stagger under the weight of their logs.) Spears, sticks, swords and crowbars—and weapons in general—all take on new meaning in this pointed play. Even the massive structural columns that thrust upward are aptly as hollow as the old men's claims of virility—and the young men's promises to stop fighting.

Some of the funniest phallic play is when Kinesias, played with great gusto by Michael Dzanko, hobbles stiff-legged to the stage and displays his enormous "desire" for his wife, Myrrhine, played coyly by Tracey Hagerman. His wild frustration is uproariously laughable. As all the male actors grow exaggeratedly impressive phalluses, ("as if carrying candles in the wind"), we are reminded that the roots of Old Comedy lay in ancient fertility rites, where such lusty enactments of bawdry conferred health, prosperity and fecundity on the whole community.

The fall theatre production of Lysistrata was a big success on College Hill. Over 1,000 people attended the performance that ran for five days (seven shows). The winter production of Terra Nova will run from February 14-18 in Oller Auditorium.

Other standout performances are given by Douglas Musser leading the chorus of old men, by Michelle Trick, who leads the chorus of women, and by Robert Madigan, who plays the macho commissioner ("Moral chaos—that's what we get for putting up with women!") The choral recitations are well-rehearsed and tight—and such timing is difficult. Finally, Christie Brown's Lysistrata is authoritative; she delivers her lines with clarity and passion, and the wide sweep of her arms is as majestic as Athena herself.

Director Dr. Ryan D. Chadwick found not only topicality in "Lysistrata" ("Saddam Hussein has done me a very great favor"), but also "an excellent way for students to learn about Greek Old Comedy." Her challenge was to tailor the translation to a college crowd. "The sex is so blatant—some modern translations are almost pornographic. But the sex is just a device...to get at the real subject which is a socio-political statement about war."

When Lysistrata vows, "Never again, praise Zeus, shall we lose ourselves in such madness," we can only sigh at the blatant irony of Aristophanes's comedy. If only Barbara's persuasion or George's passion would rise to the occasion in the Gulf.

Alumni Council Looks at Twenty- first Century

by Michele A. Miller '93

The Juniata College Alumni Council met for its fall meeting during Homecoming Weekend on Saturday, October 20, 1990. This organization represents over 10,000 Juniata Alumni, and meets three times each year to keep up to date and be actively involved in the present and future of Juniata College.

Presiding at the meeting was Council President Michael D. Busch '77. He informed the council that the focus of the year was to take the "Strategies" document presented by Juniata College President Robert W. Neff, and translate it into specific actions.

Dr. Neff addressed the council in a brief presentation focusing on the "Strategies and Tactics" of the college for the improvement of facilities, increase in faculty development, continuance of the tradition of quality students and enhancement of diversity, and also to raise more money to support these measures. Dr. Neff challenged, "Juniata is in the top 100 liberal arts colleges, private and public, in the country. We're delighted to be in that company, but can we move a little further?"

Addressing the question of "Why more diversity?" Dr. Neff responded that it is an "economic and minority must, and an educational necessity." He also commented that the size of the student body (1100-1200 students) "seems appropriate for the nature of campus that we want." Additionally it was mentioned that Juniata is third in the state in giving financial aid.

Mike Busch encouraged the council to take the strategies document and be consistent and supportive of its objectives. He then introduced the recipient of the 1990 Alumni Achievement Award, Bruce Davis '65.

A report from faculty representative Ray Pfrogner '60, professor of physics, informed the council of recent actions taken by the faculty. These included a five-week summer tour of Russia by seven faculty members, a trip to China by a delegation of Juniata physics professors, an update of the faculty manual, and the need for a change in the daily schedule.

The faculty report was followed by a report on the senior class, given by Jeff Muriceak '91. Student Government representative Wendy Wengert informed the council that there were no "big" issues, and spoke of the forums between faculty/administration and students, dealing with social and ethical problems in order to raise global awareness — sponsored by Student Government.

It was reported by student Kelly Crawford '92 that beginning this year there would be no Homecoming Queen or Court, but instead students who represent service would be recognized.

Tom Pheasant '66 reported to the council on the Board of Trustees meeting, held the same morning. Actions taken included an 8% rise in tuition, discussion of healthcare benefits and faculty salaries, and also the realization of the need for a Campus Planner — someone to put together a 10-year master plan of renovations and needs of the 21st century campus. He noted that the ASF challenge for '90-'91 is to raise $1 million. He also expressed the need for more communication between the Alumni Council and the Board of Trustees.

Chairpersons reported on individual committee actions following a brief work session. The Admissions Committee encouraged members to be a part of the recruiting effort and of Juniata Admissions Volunteers. The Alumni Events Committee reported its two objectives for the year: increase overall interest of potential and new alumni, and also develop a geographical network with local contact points. They are planning an alumni event for Spring '91.

Linda Phelps '66, chairperson of the Awards and Nominations Committee, noted that the committee prepared the slate of officers for the 1991-92 ballot. She also informed the group that a plaque has been proposed, listing alumni service and achievement award winners to be placed in Ellis Hall. Speaking for the Communications Committee, Janine Katonah '69, reported the need for an institutional market plan. The newly formed Development Committee will formalize its purposes and goals at the next council meeting.

Following the committee reports, members of the class fund agents' meeting challenged council members to help raise $100,000 in the month of October, which, if accomplished, would be supplemented by a $50,000 donation from John Howe '32.

Michael Busch closed the session by announcing the date of the next meeting: February 23, 1991 — also the date of the Presidential Ball. The spring meeting will be held Reunion Weekend, May 17-18, 1991.

Juniata College Hosts International Symposium

Juniata College hosted the fourth annual Central Pennsylvania Collaborative For International Education on October 25 and 26.

The conference, entitled "Opening Our Windows On Asia" was attended by educators from Juniata College, the Pennsylvania State University and 30 school districts in Intermediate Units 8, 10 and 11.

The conference helped teachers prepare for the international challenge of the next decade. The conference was intended to strengthen international studies in school districts, foster student commitment to improve international understanding, and explore current social, political, ecological, and cultural issues in Asia.

According to Martha Zauzig, Conference Coordinator and Vice President of the CPCIE, over 200 people attended the two-day conference.

Among the presenters for the conference were several members of the Juniata community. Dr. Robert W. Neff, college president, brought greetings from the College. Other Juniata speakers included: Alexander McBride, professor of art, Chinese Painting: A Comparison With Western Painting; Dr. Ray Pfrogner, associate professor of physics, Jill Pfrogner, registrar, Zhao Peng, student, and Zou Rei-Kai, visiting Chinese professor, Perspectives on Chinese Education; Dr. Kim Richardson, associate dean and director of international programs, Using Storytelling to Teach History in the Elementary School; Dr. Craig Baxter, professor of politics and history, Perspectives on Pakistan; and Dr. Norm Siems, professor of physics, Malaysia Today.

The collaborative was formed to encourage the development of an international dimension among students, teachers and community leaders of central Pennsylvania.

NEW FACULTY AND ADMINISTRATION MEMBERS

Celia Cook-Huffman, Instructor in Peace Studies

Ms. Cook-Huffman received her M.A. degree in peace studies in 1988 from the University of Notre Dame and is currently working toward the Ph.D. degree in social science from Syracuse University's Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. She received her B.A. degree in peace studies and conflict resolution from Manchester College in 1986. Ms. Cook-Huffman has identified her dissertation topic as "Groups and Conflict: The Impact of Social Identity on Resolution Processes."

Elizabeth A. Dahmus, Director of the Annual Support Fund

Ms. Dahmus comes to Juniata from The Pennsylvania State University where she worked in the university development office since 1986. Ms. Dahmus received her B.S. degree in marketing from Penn State in 1982 and her M.S. degree in public administration in 1988. Ms. Dahmus will be responsible for all phases of the Annual Support Fund.

Muriel-Paul Defour, Visiting Instructor in French

Mr. Defour holds degrees in Sociology and English from Universite Jean Monet in St. Etienne. He served as a teaching assistant in the United Kingdom (Ireland) from 1986 to 1987 and is proficient in French, English and Italian.

Scott A. Devore, Head Athletic Trainer

Mr. Devore received his bachelor's degree in sports medicine and athletic training from Mercyhurst College in 1989. He earned an M.A. degree in physical education and athletic training from Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo. He served as head athletic trainer at Loy Norrix High School in Kalamazoo since 1989.

Christin Freitag, Visiting Instructor in German

Ms. Freitag attended Bonn University where she studied English language and literature, German language and literature, and education theory and teaching methods. She received her M.A. degree in 1989. Following completion of her degree Ms. Freitag served as an intern at the American Embassy in Bonn, working with the U.S.I.S. youth exchange program.

Susan A. London, Assistant Director of the Annual Support Fund

Ms. London is a 1990 Juniata graduate with a degree in political science. While a student, she served as a tour guide for the admissions office, a resident hall assistant, and secretary for her class.

Sharon L. McCarthy, Visiting Assistant Professor of Chemistry

Dr. McCarthy received her bachelor of science degree from Northeastern University in 1979. She continued her studies at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, where she received her M.S. degree in synthetic organic chemistry and her Ph.D. degree in theoretical chemistry. Dr. McCarthy served as a Dreyfus Teaching Fellow at Juniata last year.

Lauree H. Meyer, J. Omar Good Visiting Distinguished Professor of Evangelical Christianity

Dr. Meyer comes to Juniata from Bethany Theological Seminary where she served as an associate professor of biblical theology. Dr. Meyer received her undergraduate degree in 1955 from Bridgewater College. She earned a master of arts degree and a doctorate from the Divinity School of the University of Chicago. In 1982 she was a Fellow at the Institute for the Advanced Study of Religions at the University of Chicago.

Donna M. Murphy, Visiting Assistant Professor in Education

Dr. Murphy received her Ph.D. in special education from the University of Virginia in 1986. Her M.S.Ed. in special education and B.S.Ed. in elementary education were completed at the University of Kansas. Dr. Murphy has served as an assistant professor of education at Lehigh University and has held faculty appointments at Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario; St. Lawrence College of Kingston; and the University of Virginia.

Nancy Neil, Visiting Instructor in Education

Dr. Neil received her Ph.D. in educational administration at the University of Pittsburgh in 1989. She received her M.Ed. in elementary education and reading and her B.S. in elementary education from California State College. Dr. Neil has been employed in the Hempfield Area School District in Greensburg since 1971. She has served as supervisor of pupil personnel services and externally funded programs since 1986.

Peter N. Peregrine, Assistant Professor of Anthropology

Dr. Peregrine recently completed requirements for the Ph.D. in anthropology from Purdue University where he served as a staff member in the department of sociology and anthropology. Dr. Peregrine's fields of specialization include the archeology and ethnohistory of eastern North America, economic anthropology, political anthropology, and world-systems theory. He has received numerous academic awards and holds membership in a variety of honor societies. Dr. Peregrine is widely published and has several works in progress.

Tomislav Sunic, Assistant Professor of Political Science

Dr. Sunic comes to Juniata from the California State University at Fullerton where he served as an assistant professor in the department of political science. Dr. Sunic received his Ph.D. in political science from U.C. Santa Barbara in 1988. He received his M.S. in international affairs in 1985 and dual B.A. degrees in French language and literature and English language and literature from the University of Zagreb in Yugoslavia.

Inga Waite, Public Services Librarian and Instructor

Ms. Waite is a 1990 graduate of the Graduate School of Library and Information Science of the University of Washington. Since completing her M.L.S. degree, she has served as a reference assistant at the Odegaard Undergraduate Library at the University of Washington. Ms. Waite received her undergraduate degree in liberal arts from St. John's College in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Donna S. Weimer, Assistant Professor of Communications

Dr. Weimer recently completed requirements for the Ph.D. degree in speech communication from The Pennsylvania State University. She received her M.A. in speech communication in 1983 and her B.A. in psychology in 1974 from Penn State. Dr. Weimer's research emphasis includes rhetorical theory and criticism, the history of communications technology, the philosophy of science, and cognitive and developmental psychology.

Fengman Zhang, Instructor in Mathematics and Computer Science

Mr. Zhang is in the process of completing work on his dissertation titled "A Learning Theory and Neural Network Modeling." He completed preliminary work on the Ph.D. degree in 1989 at Clarkson University where he received the master of science degree in 1986. He received his B.S. degree in mathematics and computer software from Zhongshan University in Guangzhou, China in 1976. Mr. Zhang has most recently served as a teaching assistant at Clarkson University.

Rei-kai Zou, Visiting Instructor in Chinese

Mr. Zou is a teacher in the English Department of Dalian Institute of Foreign Languages. His field of expertise is linguistics and translation. He is a resident of Liaoning Province of the People's Republic of China.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Donna Coleman recorded John Anthony Lennon's composition titled Death Angel: metamorphosis, which he wrote for her in 1980 for the Capstone Label, Composer's Society, due for release in spring 1991. On September 9, she was a guest on David Berry's "Music Studio" classical music program on WFBG-FM, Altoona. The broadcast featured her compact disc recording of Charles Ives's "Concord" Sonata.

Ray Pfrogner attended the summer meeting of the American Association of Physics Teachers (AAPT) in Minneapolis, MN. He was appointed to chair the Section Representatives Nominating Committee; presented a paper "The Vibrations of a Tennis Racquet"; attended several technical sessions; and entered the AAPT Tennis Tournament and won!

Jerry Harrington attended a Media Directors' Conference at Penn State in July. As an invited panelist, he spoke on organizational structures for the instructional media community in Pennsylvania.

In July, Doug Glazier gave a paper, "Genetic and ration-level effects on egg size and number in Daphnia magna: Implications for models of life history evolution," at the Fourth International Congress of Systematic and Evolutionary Biology at the University of Maryland.

During a recent visit to Japan, E-I Ochiai gave a talk on ribonucleotide reductase at University of Tokyo, Tokyo Institute of Technology, Science University of Tokyo, Waseda University and Gumma University. His article, "The Paradox of the Activity Coefficient" has been published recently in the Journal of Chemical Education, 67, 489 (1990). His recent paper "Why Calcium? — Principles and Applications in Bioinorganic Chemistry-IV," has been accepted for publication in the Journal of Chemical Education. He presented two papers at the 10th International Congress of Biophysics held in Vancouver, B.C., Canada, July 29-Aug. 3.

Kim Richardson presented a session on "Using Storytelling to Teach History & Culture" at the World Congress on Reading in Stockholm in July.

Andy Murray was the keynote speaker at the Church of the Brethren National Youth Conference held at Colorado State University in August. He and his wife, Terry, wrote the theme song and led the music for the fifth time!

Tom Woodrow served as project director for Juniata's Eisenhower grant for developing an elementary science resource center on campus.

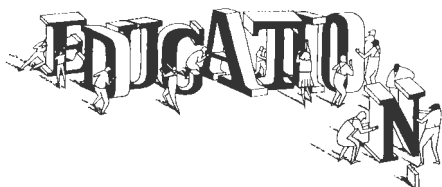

Fay Glosenger presented a workshop titled "Whole Language: A Developmentally Appropriate Approach to Literacy" at PACCA annual state conference in Reading on October 4.

Martin Lammon gave a poetry reading on October 16 at Saint Francis College. He read from his book-in-progress tentatively titled "News From Where I Live." Poems include those published recently in West Branch, The Chariton Review, and The Raystown Review, as well as new as yet unpublished poems.

Also in October, Lammon conducted a poetry-writing workshop for ninth-graders in the Hollidaysburg public school system. On the 18th, a group of Williamsburg High School seniors visited Lammon's freshman English class where they participated in class writing assignments and discussions.

As a speaker for the Pennsylvania Humanities council, Tom Baldino was invited to deliver his two lectures, "Who Should Bear Arms?" and "What Do We Do About Philadelphia?" at Lafayette and Lebanon Valley Colleges in October and at LaSalle University and Albright College at a future date.

William Martin will again be cited in Marquis 23rd edition of Who's Who in the East. Martin has also been elected to serve a two year term as a member of the executive committee of the Mid-Atlantic Association for School, College & University Staffing. MASCUS is a teacher placement organization representing colleges and universities, private and public schools, located in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

ASF GETS BOOST FROM PHONE CAMPAIGN

Over $68,600 was pledged for the Juniata College Annual Support Fund during a successful "Student Phone-a-Thon" last month according to Susan London, assistant director of the ASF.

Juniata students representing all four classes and numerous clubs and organizations took part in the phone-a-thon to help solicit funds for the 1990-91 ASF drive. A total of $68,662 was pledged toward the overall goal of $1 million for this year's annual fund effort.

"We are pleased with the results of the phone-a-thon and we had a lot of fun along the way," said London. "It was gratifying to see such a dedicated response by our students. Their commitment helped us raise nearly $45,000 in new and increased dollars."

The class of 1992 was awarded first place in the class competition, finishing just in front of the senior class of 1991 for money raised. The freshmen class of 1994 was a close third followed by the sophomore class of 1993.

Among the clubs and organizations, WKVR Radio (Power 92) took top honors by edging out KVASIR, the college's literary magazine. Other groups in the competition included Circle K, Juniata College Outreach, Women's Action Committee and Phi Chi Theta.

Because of the phone-a-thon's achievements in new and increased giving, the college will actually receive over $100,000 from the project with the addition of a challenge grant from John Howe (see story in Winter "Connections"). Howe, a 1932 Juniata graduate, pledged one dollar for every two dollars in new and increased giving during the month of October.

"In 20 nights of calling our students reached over 2,200 alumni and friends of the college," stated London. "It was a successful project thanks to the students as well as the faculty, staff and community businesses who supported the effort."

London noted assistance from a variety of local businesses, including McDonald's, Mead, Miller's Restaurant, Hoss's, Dairy Queen, Mister Donut, Arby's, Kelly's, Big Wrangler, Wendy's, Original Italian Pizza, Budget Beverage, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Raystown Beverage, Zack's Yogurt, and Cora and Ed's.

"The Juniata College Annual Support Fund has become an increasingly important factor for Juniata in recent years," said ASF Director Beth Dahmus. "Over one-fourth of the ASF total goes to annual scholarships for current students who need financial aid while the remainder supports the operating needs of the college."

This year's $1 million goal is the largest in the 21-year history of the ASF.

JAV in its Second Year

Juniata Admissions Volunteers play an ever increasing role in Admissions Office recruitment strategies. This volunteer organization has a mere 1 1/2 years experience, yet its impact thus far has been outstanding. The most exciting aspect of this organization is its tremendous potential for growth and impact on the future of Juniata College.

Exactly what do JAV members do and specifically how do they impact the Admissions Office? First and foremost, a JAV member talks about Juniata deliberately and consistently. When a JAV member meets a potential student, he/she talks about Juniata educational experience as it exists today and their personal past experiences of a Juniata liberal arts education and the success it has brought to them. A JAV member talks to friends, acquaintances and associates who have college age children in high school and who may also benefit from a Juniata education. Many students take the next step in the college selection process with Juniata because of encouragement from a JAV member.

Secondly, a JAV member follows students through the admissions process. With the help of the Admissions Office, JAV members are informed of students in their area who have had contact with Juniata. JAV members find it extremely rewarding to see one of their "referrals" take the next step in the admissions process.

In a typical month, JAV members will contact 717 students who have expressed more than a casual interest in Juniata College.

"Contacting students and their parents is really an exciting and fun thing to do. Each individual member can be as involved with organization as his/her time permits. You let us know how much time you can put into the organization. Plus, what could be more exciting than continually being in touch with Juniata; the people, the students, the superb academic program and other alumni?" said Michelle Bartol, associate director of admissions.

Anyone interested in more information should call the Admissions Office, Monday through Friday 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. 1-800-526-1970.

A total of $68,662 was pledged during a recent ASF phone-a-thon. This year's ASF goal is $1 million.

Juniata Honors its Supporters During Annual Founders Club Dinner

Nearly 300 persons attended the annual Founders Club dinner at Juniata College during Homecoming Weekend 1990. The dinner honored those who have played significant roles in the fund-raising and development programs of the college over the past year.

The Founder's Club, which is 51 years old, is comprised of donors who contribute $100 or more to the college annually. The Founders Club membership remained above 2,000 for the second year in a row with 2,178 persons.

"We are pleased to have the support of so many dedicated alumni and friends," Juniata President Dr. Robert W. Neff said. "I'm also proud to recognize the many members of the Founders Club who play leadership roles in various Juniata alumni and college advancement organizations."

David Andrews, chairperson of the 1989-90 Annual Support Fund (ASF), was recognized along with Richard and Helen Hollinger, co-chairs for the 1990-91 ASF campaign. The Hollingers acknowledged the success of last year's ASF and pointed to the important role individual Class Fund Agents will play again this year to help achieve a $1 million goal.

Dr. Neff added that the ASF has become an increasingly important factor for Juniata in recent years. Over one-fourth of the fund's total goes to annual scholarships for current students who need financial aid while the remainder supports teaching.

Dr. Neff presented special gifts to members of the Quinter Society who were in attendance. Quinter Society membership is limited to those benefactors whose annual giving has reached $5,000 or more. Quinterians become permanent members of the society when their lifetime giving equals or exceeds $100,000.

Michael Busch, president of the Juniata National Alumni Association, presented this year's Alumni Achievement Award to Bruce Davis '65. Davis is the executive director of The Academy of Motion Pictures, Arts and Sciences in Beverly Hills, California.

Quinter Society members were presented with special gifts during the Founders Club dinner. Among the twenty-five people recognized were (left to right): Jane Swigart '27, Beulah Baugher, Elizabeth R. Oller '23, Dr. John C. Baker '17, Harold B. Brumbaugh '33, and Edith Cutrell '27.

Lifetime members of the Juniata College Quinter Society were recently presented with a special shield depicting James Quinter, for whom the society is named.

Quinter, Juniata's first president, was a leader in the educational reform movement of the Brethren Church in the second half of the 19th century. The founding of the Brethren Normal School in Huntingdon in 1876 fulfilled a vision that he had cherished for many years. Quinter's leadership carried the fledgling Normal School on to become Juniata College.

"James Quinter was a man of uncommon vision and uncommon commitment," said Dr. Robert W. Neff. "We are fortunate to have an eminent group of alumni and friends who share his values."

"Members of the Quinter Society have taken values, ideas, and creativity passed on from family, teachers, and friends and incorporated these into lives that personify the mission of Juniata College."

"James Quinter helped define this mission and believed in the value of an education 'which gives us control of our minds' and 'the power of being able to apply the mind.' Quinter Society members have committed to passing this vision on to others."

Juniata Begins New Tradition

As half-time of the Homecoming football game against Albright began on Saturday, October 20 in Knox Stadium on the Juniata College campus you might have expected to see Juniata's loveliest coeds on the arms of their escorts anxiously awaiting to see if they would be the one — the homecoming queen.

Such was not the case this year, however, as Juniata students initiated the first Community Service Awards presented to members of the four classes at Juniata who exemplify a spirit of service to others.

According to Kelly Crawford, a junior and co-chair of the Homecoming Committee, the goal of the committee was to "avoid the sexist perspective normally associated with the selection of the homecoming queen. We wanted to look for and recognize students who go unnoticed and who contribute, not just to Juniata, but to the larger community as well," she said.

"These are students who are involved in, for example, Special Olympics, Circle-K, Big Brothers/Big Sisters programs, Amnesty International, and the Foster Grandparents Program," according to Crawford.

"The half-time ceremony will attempt to focus not necessarily on the most visible Juniata students, but on those students who contribute in unseen ways to our community," Crawford went on to say. "Through this process, we hope to alter the manner in which students are frequently stereotyped and pigeonholed into certain social and academic categories."

The process whereby the students were selected was not a public election. It began with nominations from faculty, staff and students followed by careful scrutiny and final selection by a committee made up of students, faculty and administrators of the college.

The recipients of the 1990 Community Service Awards are: Grettel Wentling a freshman, pre-veterinary science major from Rothsville, Pennsylvania; Jennifer Bradley a freshman peace and conflict studies major from Lewistown, Pennsylvania; Ayinde Alakoye a freshman political science major from Gaithersburg, Maryland; James McClure a freshman exploratory studies major from Meyersdale, Pennsylvania; Ari

Nineteen students were recognized on Homecoming Weekend for the time and energy they give to others. These students represent the ideals of community service at all levels. Their contributions extend beyond the campus into the local community, into hometowns and other areas of the world. Faculty nominated students for this award and a carefully chosen selection committee, comprised of students, faculty and administrators determined the recipients. Students received their certificates from Dr. Robert Neff and were congratulated by Robert and Eileen Sill '59 '57, recipients of the Alumni Service Award, and Dr. Bruce Davis '65, Alumni Achievement Award recipient.

Cornman a freshman environmental studies major from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; from Transkei, South Africa, an exploratory studies major, sophomore Ella Stofile; from Fairfax, Virginia, a personnel major, sophomore Ron Laue; from Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, a secondary education and history major, sophomore Philip Bloch; from Almond, New York, a biology-ecology and environmental science major, sophomore Carolyn Copenheaver; from Wind Gap, Pennsylvania, a geology and chemistry major, sophomore Jen Shriver; from Lombard, Illinois, a peace and conflict studies and ecology/environmental science major, junior Joel Meyer; from Trout Run, Pennsylvania, an accounting major, junior Richard Thompson; from Annville, Pennsylvania, an English/peace and conflict studies major, junior Rebecca Wentling; from Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, a natural science/geology major, junior Jeff Mills; a social work/social sciences major from Bath, Pennsylvania, senior Bonnie Fogel; a communications/education major from Boxborough, Massachusetts, senior Kara Laughlin; a psychology and sociology major from Huntingdon, Pennsylvania, senior Mary Blazina; a psychology major from Biglerville, Pennsylvania, senior Deb Dougherty; and a biology major from York, Pennsylvania, senior Mary Gembe.

The new format for the celebration of Homecoming activities at Juniata represents yet another example of the college's commitment to diversity in the educational environment. This commitment, which is in keeping with the college's mission, has been exemplified through the variety of programs presented through the year.

"Anything that brings about a dialogue concerning women's issues or racial issues or the whole sense of people learning to appreciate differences in others — you need to seize those opportunities," said William Huston, director of programming and conferences.

From the Artist Series through speakers and awareness programs, the college views its role as responsible educator to be foremost as it seeks to provide the highest quality liberal arts education.

Hollywood Alumnus Earns Award

This year the Juniata College Alumni Achievement Award was presented to D. Bruce Davis, a member of the class of 1965. The award represents not only the recognition of Davis' achievements, but also recognition of the potential power of the liberal arts education available at Juniata College.

The award is given annually to the Juniata College graduate who has experienced great success in his or her chosen career, and Davis has certainly achieved a high degree of success.

After graduating from Juniata, he earned a master's degree from the University of Maryland and then returned to Juniata in 1968 as a faculty member.

He interrupted his teaching to take a sabbatical leave at Columbia University to study film making, and returned to Juniata to become chairman of the college's theatre department.

After leaving Juniata in 1980 to pursue a writing career, he was hired in 1981 by the Academy of Motion Pictures, Arts and Sciences and the Academy Foundation. He became the executive administrator in 1983, and in 1989 was appointed executive director of the Academy.

Davis is the driving force behind the establishment of a new film library in Beverly Hills in the historic Municipal Waterworks Building. This library will contain the 12,000 films, 18,000 books, 73,000 letters and 5 million photographs in the Academy's collection. The project, which promises great things, is only one of Davis' many contributions to the motion picture industry.

In his acceptance speech, Davis made commentary on, among other things, Los Angeles smog, the Oscars, and award ceremonies in general with all of their sometimes dubious/sometimes direct effects on him. He also expressed his appreciation.

"I am extremely grateful to the alumni council, to Dr. Neff and to anyone at all who had any influence in skewing the vote in my direction," he said. "It was something I was very startled by and that I am more grateful for than I will probably ever let you know."

An underlying theme in Davis' remarks was an awareness of past recipients of the Juniata College Alumni Achievement Award. "I have joined a distinguished company," he said. "Two observations spring to mind if you have an opportunity to look at the list (of prior recipients). For a 114 year-old coeducational college, we have found very few distinguished female alumni to honor and we need to correct that. The second is that until very recently none of the honorees had made their mark in the arts."

The award was won in 1988 by Peter Marzio, a classmate of Davis' who now curates the most prestigious art collection in Houston, and now, in 1990 by Davis.

Davis made mention of another Marzio/Davis era Juniata graduate who has made a name for herself in the arts. "A couple of years behind us was a quiet, stunningly intelligent woman named Janet Kauffman. . . . She has now become one of the most impressive writers of fiction that we have in this country.

"What was going on here," he asked. "How did we suddenly get these people who actually got up the nerve to go out and make a career in the arts coming from a small college with a much greater emphasis on the sciences and several other areas?

"It had to do with the fact that Calvert Ellis, against all odds, had managed to lure to this campus a number of extremely vibrant teachers in the visual arts, in the literary arts and in the performing arts," Davis explained. "They kept things in just enough of a ferment that you could do something almost every night of the week that had to do with art.

". . . [through the influence of certain professors] it [Juniata College] became a stimulating place to be, whether you were a chemistry major, or a history major or whatever. The arts became something real, not some intimidating thing that other people do, that you have to be somebody that is descended from painters or something like that to have anything to do with. They were just another way of making a living — if you wanted to be that.

"So, I would urge, as we do our planning at events like this, that we try to keep that critical mass of exciting teachers who can show young people, whether or not they come to Juniata with any kind of interest or background in the arts at all, that the arts are there, and that there are ways to devote your lives to them and to find nurture in them, whether you see them as simply a relaxation or whether you choose to make that your sole focus.

"There's a mission here, and it's one that we met handsomely a number of years ago. I know that there are certainly a number of teachers here now, who are great, great teachers and fulfill the kind of mission that I'm talking about. I'd like to see us surround them with just a few more," he concluded.

"To all of you, thank you very, very much. I'm deeply appreciative."

JC Students Get Involved

"You are my immortality," said President Robert W. Neff to a large group of students at opening convocation this year. What he hoped to convey in his speech was that what students take with them from this institution will in some way reflect the Neff administration. That part of each student's success and growth will be Robert Neff's legacy.

If these Juniata students are any indication of President Neff's immortality, then we all have a very bright future. Hundreds of students at Juniata College are involved in campus and community activities to assist those who are less fortunate. Students are donating food to the local food bank, volunteering and hosting Special Olympics, developing a recycling plan for the campus, and travelling to Haiti to build medical facilities.

Last year Center Board added a multicultural programming committee to their organization. Later in the year an African-American Association and "The Forum," an organization for returning adult students, were formed. Amnesty International continues to be active on campus, working toward four goals: (1) The unconditional release of prisoners being persecuted because of beliefs, religion or race who have neither used or advocated violence; (2) a fair trial for political prisoners who may or may not have used or advocated violence; (3) elimination of the death penalty; and (4) an action network to stop the destruction of rain forests.

Joel Meyer '92 an active member of the Human Concerns Committee, Campus Ministry Board, the Peace and Conflict Studies Committee and the Multi-Cultural Programming Committee, said of his involvement, "I don't think about what I do that much, I just go out and do it. Sometimes you have to create the opportunity, but there are more than enough things on campus in which to get involved.

"There's really nothing profound about what I do," he said. "In fact it's pretty simple, I help other people because it's part of my makeup and it makes me feel good," he adds.

Students are doing good things for others in all kinds of ways, everything from donating their blood to the Red Cross, to providing young children in the community with a "big sister and big brother." Members of Campus Ministry learned more about the homeless while serving as volunteers in a soup kitchen in Washington D.C. and each spring a "Meal for CROP" is organized on campus to fight hunger throughout the world.

Even with the academic rigor of the classroom, students find time to volunteer. Senior Bonnie Fogel, chairperson of JC Outreach, believes that her community service work will provide her with valuable experience for a career in social work. Members of JC Outreach work with programs that include: Adopt A Grandparent, Planned Partner, Special Friends, Special Olympics, the Bloodmobile, United Way, the American Lung Association and Habitat For Humanity. Ms. Fogel explains, "In high school I didn't do anything like this, but being away from home made working with the Adopt A Grandparent program and other programs very appealing. If you are going to be a social worker you need to get involved in these things. I found that I really enjoyed the involvement because I was making someone's day a little brighter." Ms. Fogel was instrumental in organizing the Special Olympics event at Juniata in 1989 and 1990, serving as the games director. She supervised over 300 student volunteers in two years and touched twice as many athletes. She and Mr. Meyer are representative of numerous Juniata students.

Dr. Neff comments, "There is no limit to what our students can do for the campus community, local community and larger global community when they get started on a mission. We believe that it is important to present an environment that challenges students to get involved in these kind of projects."

Juniata In Barron's Top 300 Colleges

As high school juniors and seniors begin the difficult process of selecting a college they often turn to college guides for unbiased evaluations of the institutions being considered. The guides often rank the top institutions, including information about special opportunities available at the country's best colleges and universities.

Juniata College was recently named by Barron's Educational Publishing as one of higher education's best buys. The listing appears in the new college guide The Barron's 300: Best Buys in College Education.

According to the guide, although some of the institutions are better known than others "all deserve recognition where it counts: in the performance of their faculties, the depth and comprehensiveness of their curricula, the preparation of their students for lives after graduation, and the prices they charge for their services."

The guide referred to Juniata's outstanding faculty as "down-to-earth, competent, very thorough, and fully engaged in after-hours campus functions." According to a computer science major quoted in the guide, "These are people who show an honest, open caring for students. They are more than professors—they are friends!"

"Virtually all of Juniata's science programs offer exceptional equipment," the guide says, "including a new electron microscope, two nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometers, and a radiation lab, as well as challenging faculties. Says a premed student: 'I am not taught cookbook chemistry; rather, emphasis is placed on reasoning and thought.'"

"Within the last few years, 95% of Juniata's recommended applicants to medical school have gained admission, and the college has ranked 11th in the number of graduates who have gone on to receive doctoral degrees in chemistry. Programs in international studies, business, and early childhood education are also considered among the best," according to the guide.

In outlining special programs the guide highlighted Juniata's international offerings. "About 20% of any junior class at Juniata studies off-campus in such countries as Mexico, Japan, Spain, China, Germany, France, and Great Britain. Faculty, too, participate in a program that brings professors from other countries to the campus.

"Students preferring to stay stateside can spend a semester in Philadelphia or in Washington, D.C., through the Washington Center. Several 3-2 engineering programs are offered, with Georgia Tech, Penn State, Columbia, Clarkson, and Washington universities. A 3-3 law program enables students to complete studies for a law degree at Duquesne University in six years instead of seven."

The bottom line, according to The Barron's 300: Best Buys in College Education, is summed up in a quote from an upperclassman who said, "Students who enjoy being outdoors, working hard, and meeting challenges will love Juniata. But individuals are expected to have a sense of responsibility and not need reminders from faculty members."

Copies of the Barron's guide are available in bookstores or directly from the publisher, Barron's Educational Series, Inc. of Hauppauge, N.Y.

Students from the International Club were well represented at the Artist-On-The-Hill event on Parents' Weekend. The theme for the weekend event was "Celebrating Diversity — One Community For Many Cultures." Over 1,500 guests embarked on College Hill for the three day event.

Anna Groninger Smith Award Presented to Lynn B. Jones

Juniata announced the name of the second Anna Groninger Smith Supporting Staff Award recipient at the 1990 faculty staff dinner. The award winner for 1990 is Mrs. Lynn B. Jones, circulation supervisor at the L. A. Beeghly Library.

The award, which is presented annually, was named for Anna Groninger Smith, who retired from the college in 1964 after serving 43 years as secretary to four presidents of the college. Mrs. Smith initially took a secretarial position at the college in 1921 to Dr. I. Harvey Brumbaugh, Juniata's fourth president, after attending Juniata's business school from 1919 to 1921.

She also served as secretary to former Pennsylvania governor Martin G. Brumbaugh, while he was president of the college from 1924-1930, and served as executive secretary to Dr. Charles C. Ellis, 1930-1943, and Dr. Calvert N. Ellis, 1943-1964.

Mrs. Jones has held the position of circulation supervisor for the past six years. Prior to becoming circulation supervisor, she served as an acquisitions clerk for three years.

Each year Mrs. Jones works with approximately 20 students who serve as library aids. Because of her cheerfulness and humor, she is well-liked and respected by all of them. A co-worker once commented, "Lynn has been a good friend and co-worker. I honestly don't know what the library or the college would do without people like Lynn."

In addition to her library duties, Mrs. Jones has been actively involved in other functions at the college. She has assisted with the United Way campaign on campus and she has served on the Christmas party and staff dinner committees.

Mrs. Jones lives in Huntingdon with her husband Richard and her daughter Jennifer, who is a freshman at Juniata this fall.

JUNIATA LOSES GOOD FRIEND AND LEADER

Charles C. Ellis, 71, chairman of the board of trustees at Juniata College, died at 7:30 a.m. Wednesday, September 26 in Washington, D.C. following an extended illness.

Dr. Ellis had been a member of the Juniata board since 1966 and served as chairman since 1979. He was recognized in 1989 for his ten year stewardship as chairman. In 1973 Dr. Ellis received the Juniata College National Alumni Association Achievement Award.

Dr. Ellis, a 1940 honors graduate with an A.B. degree in economics, received his M.B.A. from Harvard University in 1942, and was awarded an honorary L.L.D. degree from Juniata in 1981. After retiring in 1982 as executive vice president for long range planning at RCA, the corporation he had been associated with for more than 10 years, Dr. Ellis became a distinguished lecturer at Georgetown University's School of Business Administration.

Through his career Dr. Ellis had also been associated with the Irving Trust, Philco-Ford Corp., Kordite Corp., Ford Motor Company, Armstrong Cork Company and the United States Navy.

At the time of his death, Dr. Ellis was also serving on the boards of U.S. Life Income Fund, Inc., Interlochen Center for the Arts, Sogen International Fund, and the Conference of Board Chairmen of Small Independent Liberal Arts Colleges.

The author of numerous articles and speeches on financial management, Dr. Ellis has served as director of such corporations as Hertz, Banquet Foods, Cushman and Wakefield, Coronet Industries, Random House, and the Fred F. French Investment Company.

In addition to the honorary doctor of laws degree and the National Achievement Award, Dr. Ellis was honored in 1989 for his "meritorious service to higher education and to Juniata College." His citation read, in part: "His courage, his good humor, his willingness to do hard work and his profound sense of responsibility to his family, corporation, country and college, all commend Charles C. Ellis to us for our affection and respect.

"If we could create an archetypal graduate who possessed all of the positive attributes to be derived from a liberal arts education, that graduate would be Charles C. Ellis."

Dr. Charles C. Ellis, chairman of the Board of Trustees, passed away on September 26. Dr. Ellis will be missed by the entire Juniata community.

Throughout his life Dr. Ellis maintained an avid interest in the arts and served as chairman of the board of directors of the Pro Musicis Foundation. His interest in higher education led him to lectureship roles at Columbia University, Rutgers University and the University of Michigan.

Through the course of Dr. Ellis' chairmanship of the board Juniata has established a position of integrity in higher education. His efforts to improve Juniata's programs have kept the College at the forefront of innovation in higher education. With a personal dedication to the wholeness of the educational experience Dr. Ellis worked tirelessly to more fully integrate all facets of college life.

Dr. Ellis is survived by his wife Jean (Good) and four children, Charles C., Pauline O., Nancy R., and Richard J. He is also survived by a sister Mrs. Ruth Hoddinott, a member of the class of 1933.

Dr. Ellis was recognized in 1988 for his many years of service to the college as chairman of the Board of Trustees.

Long time friend and trustee, Joseph Good presents Dr. Ellis with a citation for his "meritorious service to higher education."

Dr. Ellis was a distinguished lecturer at Georgetown University.

JC Band is Marching to a New Tune

The Juniata College Band is branching into new areas of entertainment. Under the direction and encouragement of Mr. Doug Bakenhus, a temporary substitute for Mr. Ibrook Tower, the students began offering their talents to the sports department last year. Their initial project was to create a pep band which performed at the men's home basketball games, in the spring of 1989. The band has continued to expand under the motivation of its members and leadership of Mr. Tower, associate professor of music. The most recent development has been the creation of the Band Boosters Organization, chartered under the student government.

Traveling to Moravian College and Lebanon Valley College presented a new way for the band to broaden its focus and provide support for the football team, not to mention to have a great deal of fun. The half-time show at the football games took a different tone, as the band presented sounds of the cowboy's west. On the home front, the band has been making itself seen at the college coffee houses. They were privileged to be able to accept an invitation by the Huntingdon community and march in the Halloween parade and the Huntingdon County Veteran's Day parade.

The most noticeable change has been the new uniform consisting of the practical, comfortable, and colorful blue and gold rugby shirt, paid for through an annual car wash held during the August band camp.

The Class of 1993 led the way for the band to begin to explore the area of jazz. Five members of the class created a small ensemble for last year's Presidential Pops Concert, and the rest of the band has been following their lead. Opening for the homecoming coffee house, the band performed "On Broadway", "Birdland", and "New York, New York", and plans for an active jazz band are under way.

On the agenda for the spring include the continuation of the pep band, strong recruiting efforts for next year's incoming class, and the organization of next fall's marching band.

Trustee Honored in New York

Juniata College trustee Harriet Michel was recently honored with two distinguished awards in New York City. Ms. Michel received the Woman on the Move Award of the Anti-Defamation League at a tribute dinner held at the Grand Hyatt Hotel in New York City. She was also awarded an honorary degree from City University of New York's Bernard M. Baruch College.

Ms. Michel, a highly regarded administrator and public policy expert, was the first African-American woman to serve as chief executive officer of the New York Urban League and the first to head a major foundation, the New York Foundation.

A 1965 graduate of Juniata College, she is president of the National Minority Supplier Development Council in New York, N.Y. She is a member of the board of directors of the African-American Institute, Citizen's Committee of New York, New York City Partnership, Interface and the TransAfrica Forum. Ms. Michel has served on the Governor's Liability Insurance Commission, the Commission on Black New Yorkers, the Commission on Early Childhood Education and the City-State Commission on Integrity in Government. She is a former resident fellow at the Institute of Politics of the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

She has had much experience in developing educational policy and programs, serving as director of special projects for the National Scholarship Service and the Fund for Negro Students, as a member of the New York City Board of Higher Education, and as a vice chairperson of the New York State Advisory Council on Post-Secondary Education.

SPORTS

Women's Volleyball Team Finishes Fourth in Nation; Football Turnaround Produces 7-2-1 Record

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL

The Juniata women's volleyball team finished fourth in the nation this fall with another solid showing in postseason play. The young Tribe won the championship of the Middle Atlantic Conference for the 10th straight time before taking the NCAA Division III East Regional title.

The Indians, making their sixth straight national final four appearance and eighth in 10 years, dropped a hard-fought semifinal match to top-ranked host Washington University (4-15, 12-15, 16-14, 5-15) before losing 3-15, 11-15, 8-15 to fifth-ranked St. Benedict (Minnesota) in the consy finals.

Juniata coach Larry Bock's squad won 22 straight matches entering the final four and finished with a 41-10 record. Only one senior, co-captain Michelle Wissinger of Johnstown (Richland HS), will be lost to graduation.

Co-captain Larissa Weimer of Altoona (Bishop Guilfoyle HS) and classmate Gina Leis of Johnstown (Bishop McCort HS) are the only juniors on the squad. A strong group of young players will get leadership from sophomores Kathy Kowalchyk of Meriden, CT (Maloney HS) and Shelly Miller of Tunkhannock.

FOOTBALL

Juniata recovered from a 2-8 record in 1989 with an impressive 7-2-1 finish this fall thanks in part to the number-one ranked total offense in the Middle Atlantic Conference. The Indians used a balanced offensive attack throughout the campaign.

The Tribe, which ended in a second-place tie at 6-2 in the MAC, averaged 365.5 yards per league game to top the chart. Juniata was second in passing (213.0) and fifth in rushing (152.5).

Coach Brad Small's offense took full advantage of record-breaking performances by senior running back Dennis DeRenzo of Reading (Exeter HS), who had 1,173 yards rushing, and senior split end Ray Shelley of Lititz (Warwick HS), who gained 1,147 yards receiving.

Quarterback Jason Miller, a junior from Waverly, NY, also responded to his first season as a full-time starter by leading the MAC in passing efficiency at 137.5. Another contributor on offense was senior kicker John O'Neill of Marlton, NJ (Cherokee HS).

While the offense got most of the headlines, the Tribe defense quietly produced two shutouts and 31 turnovers in 10 weeks.

Seniors Steve Brunner of W. Reading (Wyomissing HS) and Smokey Glover of Lancaster (McCaskey HS) anchored the front line while linebacker Jerry Look, a senior from Hummelstown (Hershey HS), led the team with 102 tackles and 32 solos.

Although the Tribe loses only three starters on each side of the football, Small has plenty of statistical gaps to fill next fall. He hits the recruiting trail with a lot to talk about.

SOCCER

The Juniata College soccer team knew that the 1990 season wasn't going to be easy; and it wasn't for a team with 18 freshmen.

After ending the 1989 season with 12 straight losses, the Tribe opened the 1990 campaign with 11 more defeats before knocking off LaRoche to end a 23-game losing streak. The Indians went on to tie their next game against Lebanon Valley but lost their last two contests to end the season with a 1-13-1 mark.

Juniata, which played steady defense, was victimized by a tough schedule and struggling offense. The Tribe lost seven games by two goals or less, and lost by decisive scores only to traditionally powerful teams like defending national champion Elizabethtown, nationally-ranked Messiah, York and Shippensburg.

Second-year coach John Mumford

Jason Miller '92 scampers down the sidelines on a quarterback keeper. Miller led the MAC in passing efficiency while leading the Indians to a 7-2-1 season.

saw some promising play from freshman goalie Frank Armetta of Catasauqua, along with a number of rookies who received valuable experience this fall.

Senior co-captains Damian Preziosi of Califon, NJ (Voorhees HS) and Andy Klimek of Pennsauken, NJ are the only two players Mumford will lose to graduation.

FIELD HOCKEY

The 1990 Juniata College field hockey team began the season with some specific goals in mind. The most pressing to coach Kathi Quinn's squad, however, was to reach the Middle Atlantic Conference playoffs.

When the regular season ended the Indians had earned a trip to the MAC playoffs for the first time since 1983, thanks to a 4-1 finish this fall in the MAC-Southwest. Although Juniata was eliminated in the quarterfinals by eventual MAC champion Messiah, the Tribe still produced its third straight winning season with an 8-5-2 record and made that elusive visit to the MAC postseason.

Not only was Juniata among the best in the conference, the Tribe received national recognition as well. The Indians received their first-ever national ranking when they were 12th in the initial NCAA Division III poll of the season.

The Juniata offense got its spark this fall from juniors Renee Rine of Millville and Suzanne McMannus of Trappe (Perkiomen Valley HS), the team's leading scorers. Junior JoLynn Barbour of Furlong (CB East HS), who completed her eligibility this fall, and senior Amy Blough of Elizabethtown were also key contributors.

While the offense produced 1.93 goals per contest, the Juniata defense limited opposing teams to 1.2 goals per game and recorded seven shutouts. Juniata put together a school-record four shutouts in a row over Wilkes, Dickinson, Susquehanna and Gettysburg.

Senior goalie Deb Dougherty of Biglerville had an 83 percent save figure while senior sweeper Jill Schadler of Perkiomenville (Perkiomen Valley HS) led the team again with nine defensive saves this fall to move her school-record career total to 38.

CROSS COUNTRY

cross country team, 2-5 in dual action, tied for 15th place out of a total of 22 at the Middle Atlantic Conference Championships.

Senior Andy Larmore of Wilmington, DE (Tatnall School) finished his season and career with another fine team-leading performance while classmate George Bentzel of West Chester (Henderson HS) finished right behind Larmore.

Seniors Andy Hulslander of Mohnton (Governor Mifflin HS) and Vince Morder of Huntingdon were also key contributors during the campaign.

On the women's side, Juniata finished with a 3-4 dual mark and took 14th out of 18 teams at the MAC Championships.

Junior Kim Wurth of Norwichtown, CT (Holy Family HS) crossed the finish line first for Juniata at the MAC race after another fine season.

Sophomore Teresa Richards of Lewistown (Chief Logan HS) had a strong season along with classmates Sara Smith of Pelham, NY (Pelham Memorial HS) and Brenda Laverty of Higganum, CT (Haddam Killingworth HS). Junior Heidi Cullen of Kunkletown (Pleasant Valley HS) also had a consistent year.

Larry Bock Records 500th Victory

Juniata College's Larry Bock became only the third coach in NCAA Division III women's volleyball history to record 500 career wins when his squad took the championship of the Elizabethtown Halloween Invitational on Oct. 27. The Indians defeated Waynesburg three games to zero for Bock's 500th coaching victory.

Bock completed his 14th season this fall and now has a career record of 505-99. This year's Juniata squad finished with a 41-10 record and placed fourth in the NCAA Division III National Tournament.

Bock has been head coach at Juniata since varsity competition began with an 11-0 regular season in 1977. His teams have won an unprecedented 10 straight Middle Atlantic Conference championships and have won 133 consecutive MAC matches.

Juniata has qualified for all 10 NCAA

Division III national tournaments, with the Indians reaching the final four the past six seasons and eight times overall. Juniata has finished third three times and was national runner-up in 1981.

Bock, who received national Division III "Coach of the Year" honors in 1984, 1988 and 1989, joined Carol Fritz, former Western Maryland coach, and Ohio Northern coach Sheila Wallace in the NCAA Division III 500-plus club.

Juniata's Berrier Named Vice President of the Middle Atlantic Conference

William F. Berrier, athletic director at Juniata College, has been named vice president of the Middle Atlantic Conference through June 1992. After completing a two-year term, Berrier will assume the duties of president for the conference until June 1994.

The MAC is currently under the leadership of William B. Manlove from Widener University, president, and Nathan N. Salant, executive director. The MAC offices are located in Schwartz Center on the Widener campus in Chester, Pa.

Berrier is a 1960 Juniata graduate and has been a member of the college staff since 1961. First named assistant dean of men, he took the baseball reins in 1969. Berrier has been wrestling coach since 1962 and athletic director since 1977.

A Harrisburg native, Berrier started four years in both football and baseball at Juniata. A Little All-American fullback, he established a number of school and MAC records and received Juniata's prestigious Stanford Mickle Award in 1960.

Berrier signed with the Dodgers professional baseball club after graduation and played four years in the organization. He remained with the club as a minor league manager through the 1974 season.

The Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference, commonly known as the Middle Atlantic Conference, originated in 1912. It is the oldest and largest Division III conference holding membership in the NCAA.

CLASS NOTES

21 REUNION '91 — May 17-19, 1991

26 REUNION '91 — May 17-19, 1991

Mabel M. Coffman states, "it is difficult for me to walk, but I am in charge of contacting church members for altar flowers for each Sunday." She also sends get-well, Easter, and Christmas cards to all shut-ins.

27

Jane Swigart is still summering in Petersburg, PA and wintering in Sebring, FL. She has a grandson and his wife, both receiving Ph.D.'s this year at Duke University and the State University of North Carolina, respectively.

31 REUNION '91 — May 17-19, 1991

Tom Knepp would like his classmates to know that his wife, Mildred, passed away on August 31, 1989. Tom also said that he enjoyed Reunion '90 and never saw so many people at a reunion.

35

Harold Green is marking his 70th year of association with the San Mar community and Fahrney Kardy Memorial Home and Chapel.

36 REUNION '91 — May 17-19, 1991

LeRoy Maxwell Sr. was honored for his 50th year anniversary of admittance to the practice of law.

Ruth B. Marsh wants everyone to know that she's alive and well and still thinking of and supporting Juniata!

37

Miriam J. Beaver has two grandchildren studying medicine: one at Jefferson Medical School, and one at University of Pennsylvania. She is travelling and gardening.

Sally Clark, president of the Gulf Coast Porcelain Artists, participated in its 22nd annual show and sale in February 1990. Her work has been featured in magazines and exhibited in Atlanta and other cities.

William Swigart, Jr. and his wife Helen celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on September 7, 1990.

Class of '39 Donates Campus Directory

The 18th and Moore Street corner entrance to the Juniata College campus has received yet another impressive addition with the recent erection of a campus directory in front of the admissions house.

The directory compliments the brick-faced sign and flower garden which accent the corner adjacent to Founders Hall.

The idea for the campus directory project came from Dr. Harold Patterson and other members of the Juniata class of 1939. Dr. Patterson has served as the chairperson for his class, which has played a key leadership role in the planning, funding and implementing of the project.

The directory features a brick monument built around a large-scale campus map. The directory area has been further beautified by the completion of additional sidewalk and landscaping. The directory is lighted for accessibility 24 hours a day.

39

John A. and Lois S. Hoffman '41 were feted in May for their 50th wedding anniversary at a party given by friends and family.

40

Robert A. and Dorothy D. Cupper '41 are looking forward to celebrating not only the fiftieth reunion in May 1991, but also their fiftieth wedding anniversary on June 21.

41 REUNION '91 — May 17-19, 1991

Augusta O. Morgan-Wiles and her husband Ray represented the Palatka chapter of the AARP at the Bi-annual Conference-Convention. Augusta is a Legislative Chairperson.

Violet Roher has been cleaning out the corners of her "empty nest" and finding some interesting and funny treasures. She says that cleaning will be a breeze from now on.

42

Anabelle Mummert Czyzewicz and her husband Edward are the proud grandparents of a new granddaughter, bringing the total to two grandsons and two granddaughters. They also retired from teaching in 1982, after having taught in secondary schools for a total of 64 1/2 years. They now live seven months on the Gulf Coast of Florida and five months in York, PA. They love their retirement and are enjoying their children.

43

Mary H. Morrow and her husband travel to the southern and western parts of the U.S. since their son lives in Florida and their daughter (Nancy '83) is in California on a two-year fellowship at UCLA Medical Research Center.

William P. Thorn has retired from practicing law. He is an adjunct professor of law at Houghton College, Houghton, NY.

46 REUNION '91 — May 17-19, 1991

Marguerite C. Oleyar has been and still is singing in choirs since her Juniata days! She and her husband have just completed a new house north of Vancouver, WA, and within sight of both Mt. St. Helen and Mt. Hood. They are keeping busy with yardwork, church, and travelling.

Bernadine (Holden) Waite is still working as a second grade teacher at the Heritage Elementary School in Wilmington, DE.

Dr. Cornelius F. Strittmatter, IV has been named professor emeritus of biochemistry at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine of Wake Forest University. He has been a member of the Bowman Gray faculty for 29 years, including 17 as chairman of the Department of Biochemistry. He has made significant contributions in teaching, research, and curriculum development. Prior to joining the Bowman Gray faculty Dr. Strittmatter served nine years on the faculty of Harvard Medical School.

48

Jack C. Buckle was awarded the Community Service Award for a non-Rotarian by the Williamsport Rotary Club in March 1990.

F.M. "Bud" Lehner retired from New York Life after 30 years of service. He is living in California and keeps busy biking and golfing.

Blair-Bedford Tries Something New

Gorgeous weather, above average attendance, and an exciting game with Allegheny in the first home football contest of the season, all contributed in making the first-ever Blair-Bedford Alumni Club Tailgate Picnic/Pig Roast a great success and possibly even a new tradition.

Held September 8, 1990, on the Langdon Baseball Field and sponsored by the Blair-Bedford Alumni Club, members of Huntingdon, Blair-Bedford, and Kish Alumni Areas were invited. Members of the Church-College Relations Council joined the group after its morning meeting.

Jeanne Bolger was elected to her fourth four-year term as Blair County Jury Commissioner in January, 1990. JUNIATA COLLEGE ALUMNI TOURS

July 7-21, 1991: ALASKA IN JULY

This tour leaves from the beautiful city of Seattle, Washington for Anchorage, Alaska on July 8. This begins a luxurious summer cruise to the wild game lands of Alaska. You will tour cities such as Anchorage-Fairbanks-Sitka. For the big game hunters, the Yukon Wildlife Preserve in Whitehorse is a special treat. See magnificent hanging glaciers, watch for eagles and whales and see how icebergs are born. Discover reminders of the Russian era at St. Michael's Cathedral. It all adds up to a top-quality Alaskan vacation. Your hosts for this tour will be Clayton N. and Judith R. Pheasant '65-'65.

Aug. 10-27, 1991: BRITISH ISLES

This popular tour takes you to London — Stonehenge — Bath — Bristol — then to Wales, land of song and lyrics. From Wales adventure to Ruthin then on to Chester — the English Lake District. Continue north past Glasgow, Fort Williams and through the heather-covered mountains of the Scottish Highlands to the isolated fishing village of Ullapool. From Ullapool we travel across Scotland to Inverness. Southeast to Edinburgh, attend the magnificent "Military Tattoo" on the ramparts of the castle. From Edinburgh, continue to Stratford-Upon-Avon, and attend a Shakespeare play. The journey ends in Windsor with a special farewell for Juniata College alumni and friends. You will return by air from London. Dorothy L. and Rex W. Hershberger '50, '50 will host this trip.

For more information, please contact the Alumni Office, Juniata College, 1700 Moore Street, Huntingdon, PA 16652 or call (814) 643-4310 ext. 440.

Class Notes

Juniata is always looking for news of its alumni: promotions, degrees, job changes, honors, marriages, births, etc., even an address change. If you fit the bill — or would like to report on a friend — please complete this form and return it to the office of Alumni Relations. We encourage you to send photos (black and white) with your news.
